Brush Turkeys

Known as ‘Woggan’ by the Yugambeh, the Brush Turkey frequent Burleigh Mountain.

- A male Brush Turkey can be distinguished by the large wattle on his neck
- Males make the nests out of dirt, twigs and branches to incubate the eggs after the female lays them.
- Brush Turkey eggs were a delicacy for the Yugambeh men but were only allowed to be eaten by the Elders.